engaging sources: the tradition and future of collecting history in the society of jesus

june 11-13, 2019

Welcome to the 2019 International Symposium on Jesuit Studies, the fifth annual gathering of scholars organized by the Institute for Advanced Jesuit Studies. Our theme this year is “Engaging Sources: The Tradition and Future of Collecting History in the Society of Jesus.”

Since its founding, the Society of Jesus has emphasized the importance of recordkeeping—of corresponding, circulating, and preserving its diverse observations, rules, and opinions from around the globe. Ignatius of Loyola fostered this attitude among the earliest Jesuits, establishing a living tradition that has continued for nearly five centuries. As a result, this distinctive archival mentality has yielded source materials that have contributed to the ongoing collective history of the Society of Jesus and to the continued self-understanding of it as a religious order. Thriving over time, these Jesuit sources—journals, monographs, archives, centers and institutes, and popular presses—stand today as unique perspectives, or as Jesuit windows to history.

At this symposium, more than seventy scholars from five continents will consider the engagement with these sources—both its continuing tradition and the possible future preservation and dissemination of Jesuit sources. A full program of the event’s fourteen individual panels and five plenary sessions follows.
